German General Staff says there was continuous fighting there for two days. It says nothing regarding the result. Troops were said to have been landed near Bulair, across the head of Gal-lipoli peninsula from Gallipoli town, but the Admiralty statement is silent regarding the operations of this force.

In contrast to the British official statement and the even more optimistic acpaper correspondents the Turks assert that the British have been driven from every point of the peninsula except every point of the peninsula except Gaba Tepeh, and that the Asiatic side of the strait, where French forces ef-fected a landing, has been entirely cleared of the invaders.

There has apparently been great naval activity in the Dardanelles since the landing operations were undertaken five ago. After demolishing the last nees at Sedd El Bahr and Kum Kaleh, guarding the entrance to the strait, the ailled fleets proceeded up to the Narrows. While the official Britstatement refers to the shelling Maidos, on the European side, it fails report from Athens that the forts of Nagara, at the head of the Narrows on the Aslatic side, had been subjected to a violent bombardment.

In the official statements issued at Constantinople mention is made of a concerted attack by British and French warships on the advanced batteries on the shores of the narrows on Tuesday. Sixteen armored cruisers and many de-stroyers are said to have taken part in this attack. According to the Octo-man accounts, three British battleships were badly damaged in the operations against the forts at the entrance of the

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Athens, dated Thursday says the French forces landed at Kum Kaleh encountered desperate, resistance and there have been sanguinary battles for the possession of the towns and villages on the Asiatic side.
